

ONE HEALTH
TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY

“One Healthy Village at a Time”

Ashton Richardson (Veterinary Medicine), Christina Babu (College of Medicine), and Thomas Jeffreys (School of Public Health)

Students from Texas A&M University will give a presentation over their visit to Ometepe, Nicaragua for a service learning and research program. The students will describe their opportunity to work in the areas of animal, human, and environmental health with the overarching program focusing on nutrition in all areas. They will also talk about partnering with the local veterinary community and a local village to implement the concepts of One Health in order to create sustainable, interdisciplinary healthcare to the people and animals of Nicaragua.

Monday, September 22, 2014
